

A photograph of two mannequins from behind, positioned against a light-colored wall. The mannequin on the left has short, wavy blonde hair and is wearing a simple, light-colored, long-sleeved top. The mannequin on the right has long, wavy brown hair and is wearing a simple, reddish-pink, long-sleeved top. The image is partially overlaid with a dark pink, semi-transparent geometric shape in the bottom-left corner, which contains white text.

Náz stands for Quality, Uniqueness, Minimalism and Sustainability.

Náz proposes garments that are consistent with an individual and modern lifestyle, more minimalist, aesthetic, ethical, fair, conscious and responsible. It is a contemporary design brand that uses alternative materials and presents a transparent value chain and fair trade.

Náz sells clothing to demanding and conscientious consumer that also seeks for a different product other than those made available by the mass market. With financially accessible solutions for an already aware public, Náz also appeals to the general public with its democratic design, the use of natural fibers and durable blends, and its neutral color palette.

It addresses the consumer with a serious commitment to the transparency of production processes and works with the surplus of portuguese textile factories, creating exclusive collections with minimal environmental impact (mainly using surplus, recycled and natural products and materials, such as recycled buttons or 3D printed buckles in biodegradable plastic) and a positive social impact (we have our own production and it's located in a zone of high unemployment rate in the textile area).

The pieces are minimalist, with a contemporary and democratic design with attention for trends (colours and small details) always presented at non-prohibitive prices.

Because sustainable and fair consumption should be a choice of everyone and not a luxury reserved to some. It is inspired by active women, seeking to create pieces that are both comfortable and elegante that can easily adapt to different occasions.
